

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Jess Montgomery is the author of the Kinship Historical Mysteries, set in 1920s Appalachian Ohio and inspired by Ohio's true first female sheriff. Under her given name, she writes the "Level Up Your Writing (Life)" column for Writer's Digest and teaches for Writer's Digest University. She was formerly a newspaper columnist, focusing on the literary life, authors and events of her native Dayton, Ohio for the Dayton Daily News. She is a three-time recipient of the Individual Excellence Award in Literary Arts from Ohio Arts Council, a two-time recipient of the Montgomery County (Ohio) Arts & Cultural District (MCAD) Artist Opportunity Grant, and has been a John E. Nance Writer in Residence at Thurber House (Columbus, Ohio).

The One Book, Many Communities committee would like to thank the presenters, facilitators, and our communities for making this community read possible. Check with your local library in the Fall to vote for the 2024 community read!

2023 COMMUNITY READ EVENTS

ONE BOOK Many Communities

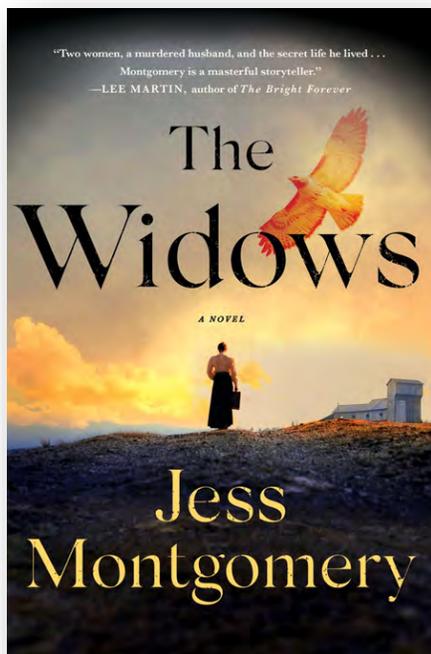

One Book, Many Communities is pleased to return with in person programming, for this, our third year. While the program had to be postponed due to the pandemic, we were still able to present a thought-provoking, live-streamed panel discussion in July of 2020 on the Dayton Literary Peace Prize winning book for non-fiction, Rising Out of Hatred.

For 2023, local libraries involved invite you to read The Widows by Jess Montgomery (or any book in the Kinship series) and participate in the programs focused on themes from the books. You will find scheduled events for all locations in this booklet including an opening program at St. Paris Public Library and an exciting grand finale event with author Jess Montgomery and WYSO's Vick Mickunas at Edison State Community College!

For more information contact your local participating library.

"Inspired by the true story of Maude Collins, Ohio's first female sheriff, and prominent labor and community organizer Mary Harris "Mother" Jones, Montgomery's debut novel features two tough-as-nails, strong-willed women whose empathy leaves a lasting impression. A simultaneous examination of women's rights, coal mining, prohibition, and Appalachian life, make this a fantastic choice for historical fiction fans."

Vick Mickunas

Vick Mickunas introduced the Book Nook author interview program for WYSO in 1994. Over the years he has produced more than 1500 interviews with writers, musicians, poets, politicians, and celebrities. Listen to the Book Nook with Vick Mickunas for intimate conversations about books with the writers who create them. Vick Mickunas reviews books for the Dayton Daily News and the Springfield News-Sun.

Who Was Mother Jones?

The most famous female labor activist of the nineteenth century, Mary Harris Jones — aka “Mother Jones” — was a self-proclaimed “hell-raiser” in the cause of economic justice.

Jones first displayed her oratorical and organizing abilities in Pittsburgh during the Great Railroad Strike of 1877.

Beginning in 1900, Jones focused on miners, organizing in the coal fields of West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Who Was Maude Collins?

Maude Collins was the happily married young mother of five in 1925. She served as a small-town jail matron working alongside her handsome husband Vinton County Sheriff Fletcher Collins until he was shot at close range and killed while arresting a man on the charge of speeding.

While the tragedy of Fletcher's untimely death shattered the world Maude had known, it also put her in a position to make history. She was eventually appointed to fill the vacancy left by her husband's death, and in 1926 was formally elected in a landslide vote that made her the first female sheriff in the State of Ohio.
